Wilson College Chambersburg, Pennsylvania

Wilson College encourages Girl Scout Gold Award recipients to apply for the Curran Scholars Program for students with academic ability and a proven record of service to community or church. Students receiving the award are expected to continue their volunteer service while in college. They will be required to contribute 260 hours of volunteer service to community or religious organizations each academic year. In addition, these students must take two classes in religion or philosophy while at Wilson and maintain satisfactory academic progress. All students, regardless of whether they have demonstrated financial need, are eligible for this program. The one-year awards range from $4,000 to the full amount that the student would have received from need-based work-study and student loan programs. Awards are renewable annually. To apply for the Curran Scholars Program, students submit three short essays and two letters of reference.
